Field of the Invention This invention relates to an optical disk player, and more particularly to an optical disk player adapted to perform an accurate tracking operation as well as an accurate focus operation. 2. Description of the Prior Art In order to read out information recorded in tracks on the optical disk, an optical disk player must perform the focus operation which controls the distance between the end portion of the objective lens of the pickup for reading out information and the surface of the optical disk, and the tracking operation which controls the radial position of the objective lens with respect to the tracks on the disk. For carrying out the tracking operation, there has been conventionally adopted a method of detecting a servo signal having a pre-defined configuration from the reproduction signal for controlling the radial position of the objective lens by means of the tracking actuator which moves the objective lens to a target track of the optical disk. As a method of obtaining the tracking control signal, there has been known a method of utilizing the fact that the tracking control signal is usually absent at the outer periphery of the track and being detected as the tracking control signal (see, for example, Japanese Patent Laid-open Publication SHO 60-6946).
