I can help you out with those 6 tips. 1) Optimize your interface for iPhone Because the iPhone's screen is so big, you'll want to make the most of it by making your interface scale properly. Do you see the little resize handle on the side of the screen? That's how you make your interface bigger or smaller—it's almost invisible, but it's there. Use that whenever you need to resize the interface. And when you want to make the app smaller, look for the "down arrow" on the bottom-left corner of the screen. Just click and drag the handle and your app will shrink. 2) Know how to use the screen If you've had your app for a while, you'll be familiar with the screen and how to navigate between things. But if this is your first iOS app, you'll want to familiarize yourself with how the iPhone and iPad screen works. The iPhone screen is relatively small, and the iPad screen is way more spacious. But even on the smaller iPhone, it can be tough to navigate if you don't know what you're doing. The Home button is used to return to the app's "root" screen. When you're at that screen, you just need to tap anywhere else on the screen to get back to wherever you were. If you're using a scrollbar, just scroll all the way up or down. 3) Get to know the screen size You can see this easily on the splash screen if you've set one up for your app. Your app screen will appear at the center of the bottom of the splash screen, and there will be a little resizing handle on the bottom-left corner of the screen to let you resize the splash screen. When you do, you'll need to resize the text on the left and right of the screen so it's at least large enough to be legible. If you have an iPhone app, I would also make the splash screen bigger by about half, as you can see below. iPhone App Splash Screen (at least 32-point) iPhone App Splash Screen (at least 48-point) 4) Make sure
